Waterlily leaves, called lily pads, are thick and buoyant leaves that float on the surface of the water in close proximity to the waterlily flower. Many, but not all, waterlilies are fragrant and produce a floral or citrus scent.

The European White Waterlily stamp on this page is a 1957 German 10 pfennig Commemorative stamp. It was issued on Oct. 4, 1957, Scott 773. It is the 1st of 2 issued for Nature Protection Day.

This stamp pair has an intact sheet edge. The numbers on the edge refer to the value of the sheet of stamps, up to that point, e.g. 1, 2 German Marks ...

The Maxicard to the right has a unique Circular Date Stamp (CDS) celebrating the Karneval (Carnival) of 1958. People in Germany have been celebrating Carnival since the Middle Ages.

This black and white photo Maxicard is Lake Staffelsee in Bavaria. It shows the Alps in the background and the European White Waterlily in the foreground.
